

Bring Dignity Revolution to your school!

We'd love for you to partner with us! Follow these five steps to bring Dignity Revolution to your school or community.

1.

Connect with your school principal, superintendent, or board.

Ask for their support! With your school administrator's permission, you can utilize school facilities and resources to bring Dignity Revolution directly to the students in your community. Discuss which program(s) will be best suited for your school—training, assembly, or challenge packages or all of them!

Fund your event.

The best way to fund your event is by securing a sponsor to help underwrite costs. Reach out to local businesses and ask for monetary donations in exchange for promoting their business at your event. Many companies will value the opportunity to tie their brand to such a positive message. It's a win-win!

3.

Secure your date.

Work with your school administrators and the Dignity Revolution team to find an event date that works for everyone, when students, faculty, and even parents are available to rally around this important message. Also make sure your facility is available to welcome attendees on that date!

4.

Plan event details with us.

Now comes the fun part! Work directly with the Dignity Revolution Coordinator to arrange details for your event, including logistics, promotion, team needs, and how to get students excited about what's to come. Secure a team of experts who want to make a difference in the lives of youth.

5.

Promote your event!

Bring your planning to life by sharing news of your event with students, staff, parents and community members. Send out posters, promote on social media, talk to local news stations, and rally school advocates to help spread the word. Your Dignity Revolution Coordinator will have plenty of ideas for building awareness and ensuring a great turnout.
